INTRODUCTION

The purpose of this guide is to improve access to the Alberta Folklore and Local History Collection. The guide serves as an inventory of the collection for anyone wishing to explore this archive housed in the Bruce Peel Special Collections Library at the University of Alberta and needs to gain an insight into its organization and arrangement. The guide has also been designed as a handy print guide, complete with a separate subject index, for anyone who wishes to view the online version of the collection without the bother of flipping between search screens and document display screens. In this way, we hope to meet the needs of those who still take comfort in print indexes, or who do not have a computer and still need to visit the library to read the materials in the collection.

Individuals who prefer a fully electronic experience may indulge their interest through the digital version of the documents and the rich indexing provided on our Website. The fully indexed and searchable electronic version of the archive can be found at <http://folklore.library.ualberta.ca>

Work began in the summer of 2000 to scan the materials in the archive and create a searchable interface. The resultant electronic version contains most but not all of the materials included in the archive. Duplicate items or materials for which the University of Alberta does not hold copyright and for which copyright could not be obtained have been excluded from the electronic version. Also excluded are the accession files which record Robert Gard's efforts in seeking out individuals willing to contribute to the University's project to preserve and disseminate local history and folklore. These exclusions point out another reason for this guide: anyone interested in tracking the development of the Folklore project or the resultant archive has guidance through the finding aid. These individuals are encouraged to visit the Bruce Peel Special Collections Library in person to view the documents.

The guide itself is the best finding aid to the collection, but it is appropriate to include some description of the archive's contents in this introduction. The materials span the experiences of the early pioneers, sometimes in their own words, or sometimes filtered through the memory of others. The title of the collection is somewhat misleading:

although part of the collection consists of folklore, much of the material falls under the 'local history' heading.

Users should be aware that the collection is a reflection of the life and times in which it was compiled. Stories and reminiscences mirror the social, political, and economic powers of the time. The perspective is largely white and male; only a small proportion of the archive relates to the experiences of the aboriginal or non-English speaking immigrant groups. Materials that do relate to aboriginal or immigrant experiences have typically been contributed by individuals who were not members of the group being discussed.

Interestingly, the archive does not include significant reference to either of the world wars, in spite of the fact that the collection was compiled, and indeed many of the materials were written, during the latter years of World War II.

The Alberta Folklore and Local History Collection is a unique and fascinating record of the experiences of our forefathers. The Extension Department of the University of Alberta is to be commended for its wisdom in sponsoring the Project, as are the Rockefeller Foundation for funding and Robert Gard for his role in seeking out the contributors.

COLLECTION OVERVIEW

Dates: 1943-1945

Extent: ca. 6 m of textual material. Note: this does not include photographic material in the collection.

Custodial Information:

In 1943 the Alberta Folklore and Local History Project was established by the Department of Extension at the University of Alberta with the help of a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation.

Robert E. Gard (1910-1992), was the Director of the Project between 1943 and 1945, collecting and writing Alberta folk material, and also encouraging Albertans to contribute their stories to the Project. During this period the Project held writing competitions, writer's conferences, commissioned three plays from Gwen Pharis Ringwood, and published the Alberta Folklore Quarterly. Gard travelled throughout the province meeting with Albertans and collecting folklore material. In June, 1945 Gard resigned from the Project to take up a new appointment at the University of Wisconsin. After Gard's resignation, Philip H. Godsell became editor of the Alberta Folklore Quarterly, which he continued to publish until June 1946. Many reminiscences and other material collected by Gard were published in the Quarterly, making it a valuable source document for historians and other researchers of Alberta history.

The Alberta Folklore and Local History Collection is housed in the Bruce Peel Special Collections Library, at the University of Alberta. For more custodial information, the special issue News from the Rare Book Room: Alberta Folklore and Local History Collection, should be consulted.

Scope and Content:

The Alberta Folklore and Local History Collection provides a variety of forms through which Alberta folklore has been expressed. The collection includes project documentation, correspondence, manuscripts, radio scripts, plays, stories, tall tales, reminiscences, poems, school yearbooks, the complete run of the Alberta Folklore Quarterly, newspaper clippings, newspapers, and photographs. Indeed the wide variety of documents and media found within the collection presents a unique archive of Alberta folklore. The material collected covers many aspects of the history, tall tales, humour and stories of Alberta's development.

Notes:

The Alberta Folklore and Local History Collection comprises of 992 accessioned files (correspondence, manuscripts, bound items etc, see Series list). This guide provides a complete inventory of the collection. Each bibliographic entry of the guide includes (where possible) the following information: name of the author, title of the file or item, year(s) of creation of the material, and the assigned accession number. A short description of the file content is also provided, listing genre, form (original or copy, holograph, typescript) and the extent of the material.

TYPESCRIPTS AND MANUSCRIPTS

Series: Typescripts and Manuscripts

Accession No.: 96-93-403 to 96-93-603

Dates: 1943-1945

Extent: 66 cm

Scope and Content: This series consists of typescripts and manuscripts. It includes biographies, correspondence, essays, obituaries, periodical articles, reminiscences, stories, poems, correspondence, tall tales, and miscellaneous items. This material was collected by various individuals from different sources and presented to the Alberta Folklore and Local History Project (AFLH).

Note: Some items in this series are re-typed versions of newspaper and periodical articles (clippings submitted to the project). The re-typed version has been assigned an approximate 1940's date and designated as a copy. Where possible the source and date of the original article has been supplied. Each record includes (where possible), the name of the author, the title of the material, the year or range of years, and accession number. A short description of the file content is also provided, listing genre, form (original, copy, typescript, holograph) and number of leaves.

NOTEBOOKS

Series: Notebooks

Accession No.: 96-93-783 to 96-93-882

Dates: 1936-1945

Extent: 40 cm

Scope and Content: This series consists of a variety of material, including correspondence, essays, newspaper clippings, tall tales, stories, reminiscences, guidebooks, and excerpts of stories from published materials. Some items in this series are re-typed versions of newspaper and magazine clippings submitted to the project. The re-typed version has been assigned an approximate date and designated as a copy. Where possible the source and date of the original article has been supplied. This series includes notebooks originally numbered 1 through 6. Since the notebooks were not bound, and their content is of significant importance, it was decided to accession and describe each item individually.

Notes: Each record includes (where possible), the name of the author, the title of the material, the year or range of years, and accession number. A short description of the file content is also provided, listing genre, form (original, copy, typescript, holograph, photocopy, carbon copy) and number of leaves.

PHOTOGRAPHS

Series: Photographs

Accession No.: 96-93-915 to 96-93-991

Dates: [1898?]-1945

Extent: 152 photographs (includes copies, and prints from photo engraving blocks), 38 photoengraving printing blocks, 18 negatives (plastic), 21 glass slides, 3 glass negatives.

Scope and Content: This series contains a variety of photographic material representing many aspects of early Alberta. The majority of the photographs were acquired by the AFLH between 1945-1946. The photograph series contains a collection of twenty-one slides (photographic copies available) from William W. Parker (see accession 96-93-941 to 96-93-961) that accompany his reminiscence "We Remember" (see accession 96-93-563). The Photographs series also contains the H.A. George Photography Collection (see accession 96-93-991), which comprises of thirty-eight photo engraving printing blocks for letter-press printing (photograph prints available). The H.A. George Collection provides a photographic account of the Peace River area.

Note: Photographic material in this series includes photographs, negatives, glass negatives and glass slides. Each record includes the title of the photographic material, the name of the author (where possible), the year or range of years and accession number. A short description of the photographic material and information on the availability of copies is also provided. The photographic material in the Alberta Folklore and Local History Collection is held separately, thereby each photograph also carries a Special Collections number given in parentheses at the end of each record (example: #P-1-84).
